SS SUMMARY

A COMMUNITY OF SERVANTS, LESSON 11

There are many reasons people give for not being a part of a church family these days. Families, in general, are often not as nurturing as they once were. Many seem to prefer a larger church environment, so they can avoid the personal commitment to each other that smaller churches offer and encourage.

But no matter the size of the church, our commitment to God requires us to work together with our brothers and sisters, for God's mission to go forward in the way He has prescribed.

He taught us, through words and practice, to be caring for and preaching to as many as we can reach. And, not only that, but to do it in a collaborative way, avoiding the potential of pride that is a hazard for individual ministries.

Through joint efforts, we can not only accomplish more, but can encourage each other along the way. And in these last days, we need all the encouragement we can get.

As we've seen, ministering to people in need encompasses many forms of service. We aren't all experts in everything, but we most certainly are drawn to some area of interest and talent that God can use to grow His kingdom. A real church family is God's chosen avenue for using our spiritual gifts.

Every church should be a community of servants. Serving God by serving others is not an option, but a proven means of true worship.
